Parish tea party in July, seems like a million years before lockdown?

Not quite “business as usual” on 4 July!

Churches are allowed to re-open for worship from 4 July, but many restrictions still apply. So no parish tea parties like the one above, for a while yet. Still, something to look forward to.

Mass for the Sick

Thursday 2 July at 7pm

Tune into this week’s live-streamed Mass for the Sick and their families, NHS and Social Care workers which is celebrated by Archbishop John Wilson, by following the links below:

Men at work

It is often said that women do all the important work in the parish. But here are photos of men at work in the parish that prove the men also muck in from time to time!

Photos: thanks to Paul and Peter: Volunteers' Day; Sorting stuff for fundraising; Men's Retreat.

Truro CAFOD Group Coronavirus Appeal ►

The Truro CAFOD Group could not hold their usual Bacon Bap event during Lent, so instead they have launched a local and online appeal for parishioners to donate the price of a bacon bap and a coffee (and a doughnut too if you like).

All donations go directly to support CAFOD's fight against the Coronavirus pandemic in the world's poorest countries, where infection rates are rising rapidly and communities don't have even the most basic facilities to help them contain and fight the virus.

Readers can donate by going to www.justgiving.com/fundraising/cafodtruro ►

Alternatively you can drop off a donation (cash or cheque made out to CAFOD) in an envelope at :

Ridge Berry,
Barrack Lane,

Live Streamed Deanery Masses

A new List (No.3) of live-streamed masses is issued as a Supplement - this one is for Churches in our Deanery only. The list shows all the mass times and automatic links are built-into the Church names, but the actual internet addresses are also shown for readers who prefer to type them in rather than use the links provided.
